Dear Friend,

In 2021, your support of Global Rights for Women has impacted thousands of survivors around the world who now have improved safety and access to justice.

As you know, ending violence against women and girls is urgently overdue, and changing laws and entire systems that reinforce it takes time. This past year had an overwhelming number of women’s rights crises around the world due to Covid, climate change and political instability, including places where we work and have partnerships.

Despite these realities, your donations open the door to meaningful changes. Your support is making a real-world difference in the lives of women and girls through legal reform and systemic change, and that’s why we are grateful you have joined us.

Thanks to you, we were able to double-down on our mission in 2021. Your contributions allowed us to continue building global relationships to increase our impact, expand our men’s nonviolence program, and change how legal professionals address survivor needs. Our programming is laser-focused on innovative and survivor-informed solutions to improve the safety of women and girls through legal reform and systemic change. As Busayapa Srisompong says so eloquently in her statement below, survivors’ access to safety and justice is essential to women’s equality.

This year, your support resulted in women and girls being impacted in over 30 countries and 5,745 individuals who participated in Global Rights for Women’s programs. We couldn’t have done this without your passion and dedication to our mission.

In Minnesota where we are headquartered, we call it “tough sledding” when challenging weather conditions hinder travel. That’s why we continue to be moved by the extraordinary dedication of individuals like you, who are committed to overcoming adversity and achieving real progress. This impact report demonstrates the pathways we have been able to open together over the previous year and what we can build on in 2022.

Thank you for helping us create a violence-free world.

"Violence against women is a matter of power and control. When survivors are seeking help from the justice system, we need to make sure they not only feel believed but also supported and empowered."

YOUR IMPACT IN 2021

Global Women’s Rights Advocacy

PROSECUTOR TRAINING TOOLKIT

32% of women on average in South-East Asia, South Asia, and in the Pacific Region have experienced intimate-partner violence.

Our recently published 183-page training manual will change the way prosecutors listen to survivors and hold perpetrators accountable across Asia.

This training will impact 30% of the world's women

It will be implemented in 32 countries in Asia to improve support for survivors

GUIDING GENDER-RESPONSIVE POLICING

Global Rights for Women partnered with UN Women to implement best practices to support victims of violence upon their first contact with police. The first to respond is crucial in ensuring victims' safety thereafter.

22 countries will strengthen systems' response to protect and support women

IMPROVING MINNEAPOLIS POLICE RESPONSE TO DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

21,500 women per year report domestic violence to Minneapolis police. On average, officers wrote reports or made arrests in response to 20% of calls.

We’re working with advocates, survivors and the MPD to improve the protocol for domestic violence response.

189,000 women will be impacted as a result of our recommendations.

Men’s Behavior Change Programs

Global Rights for Women facilitated men’s nonviolence groups with participants in 16 counties across Minnesota, the U.S., and from other countries.

98% of participants successfully completed the program

80 children and 40 survivors were directly impacted

"...What you have to realize is that he didn't hit or bruise me, but I lived in fear everyday. After he went through the men's group he stopped blaming me for his anger and I don't blame myself anymore. He shifted to finally see how he was impacting me and our child."
